Serve well those who have served

Most student veterans are unable to finish their degrees within the 36-month GI Bill limitation, and while Hazlewood benefits help fill the gap, these nontraditional students still financially struggle. In addition, many spouses of veterans also plan to attend college, but financial limitations make this goal nearly impossible. Student veterans attending Texas A&M bring notable strengths that will impact our state, nation and world. Establishing an endowed scholarship for veterans and their spouses will make a lasting impact that will serve future generations of veterans who aspire to call themselves Aggies.

You can support an Aggie veteran's education through one of three scholarships: Aggie Veteran Freedom Scholarships, Aggie Veteran Patriot Scholarships or Aggie Veteran Honor Scholarships. Scholarships are payable over a five-year period, and you can also create a future scholarship through a planned gift. To fund your scholarship, you can use cash, securities, real estate or corporate matching gifts. You can also name your scholarship in memory or honor of a person, class or organization. These scholarships provide a student with a yearly stipend. Once the student graduates, a new student will benefit from your gift.

Leave a Legacy

Because Aggie Veteran Scholarships are endowed, they will support veteran students and their families forever. Scholarship endowments are managed by the Texas A&M Foundation, while the funds are awarded by a committee that includes members from the Don & Ellie Knauss Veteran Resource & Support Center and Texas A&M Scholarships & Financial Aid. Aggie Veteran Scholarships may also be awarded to deserving students who are the spouse of a veteran. Veteran spouses often find themselves with few resources, a challenge we're dedicated to combating.
